

Continuing Legal Education Seminar: GPL Enforcement and Legal Ethics

Attendees of the full day seminar will learn about copyleft and other important concepts in the GNU family of licenses, best practices in the free software licensing enforcement process, ethical considerations important to any lawyer working with clients involved in free software, and other current topics in free software licensing. We invite legal professionals, law students, free software developers, and anyone interested in licensing and compliance topics to sign up.

The sessions will be led by experts and respected leaders in the free software community, including:

- > Bradley Kuhn, president of the Software Freedom Conservancy and a member of the board of directors of the FSF;
- > Justin C. Colannino, JD, attorney at Microsoft;
- > Marc Jones, JD, in-house counsel and compliance engineer at CivicActions; and
- > Donald R. Robertson, III, JD, licensing and compliance manager of the Free Software Foundation.

While registration is open to the public, this seminar is a special opportunity for legal professionals and law students who can potentially earn continuing legal education (CLE) credits for participating (approval pending). Low income legal professionals and students sign up free.
